WEEKLY FINANCIAL NEWS

Financing			Market Commentary
	RATE	APR	A rare pricing flip in the U.S. housing market, something that hasn't happened in over a half a century, is puzzling analysts, who worry that it might be indicative of deeper structural issues. Last week, The Kobeissi Letter said, "the US housing market is broken," while noting that the average prices of new single-family homes have been lower than that of existing homes over the past year, "the first occurrence in 54 years." The shift marks a stark reversal from historic trends, where newly built homes have almost always commanded a premium due to modern construction, updated features and limited new supply relative to existing inventory. Citing data from Apollo Chief Economist, the U.S. Census Bureau and the National Association of Realtors, the post notes that the price of a new home fell below the price of an existing home "for the first time since 2005." The post also highlights how dramatic the swing has been compared to recent years. "By comparison, new homes were 10% more expensive just 3 years ago, measured by the 12-month moving average," it said, adding that "the difference was as much as 40% in 2012," following the 2008 financial crisis. It concludes by saying, "Something is seriously wrong with the housing market." Source: Benzinga.com Vishaal Sanjay

Financing			Market Commentary
CONV	RATE 5.88%	APR 6.02%	A rare pricing flip in the U.S. housing market, something that hasn't happened in over a half a century, is puzzling analysts, who worry that it might be indicative of deeper structural issues. Last week, The Kobeissi Letter said, "the US housing market is broken," while noting that the average prices of new single-family homes have been lower than that of existing homes over the past year, "the first occurrence in 54 years." The shift marks a stark reversal from historic trends, where newly built homes have almost always commanded a premium due to modern construction, updated features and limited new supply relative to existing inventory. Citing data from Apollo Chief Economist, the U.S. Census Bureau and the National Association of Realtors, the post notes that the price of a new home fell below the price of an existing home "for the first time since 2005." The post also highlights how dramatic the swing has been compared to recent years. "By comparison, new homes were 10% more expensive just 3 years ago, measured by the 12-month moving average," it said, adding that "the difference was as much as 40% in 2012," following the 2008 financial crisis. It concludes by saying, "Something is seriously wrong with the housing market." Source: Benzinga.com Vishaal Sanjay

Financing			Market Commentary
CONV	RATE 5.88%	APR 6.02%	A rare pricing flip in the U.S. housing market, something that hasn't happened in over a half a century, is puzzling analysts, who worry that it might be indicative of deeper structural issues. Last week, The Kobeissi Letter said, "the US housing market is broken," while noting that the average prices of new single-family homes have been lower than that of existing homes over the past year, "the first occurrence in 54 years." The shift marks a stark reversal from historic trends, where newly built homes have almost always commanded a premium due to modern construction, updated features and limited new supply relative to existing inventory. Citing data from Apollo Chief Economist, the U.S. Census Bureau and the National Association of Realtors, the post notes that the price of a new home fell below the price of an existing home "for the first time since 2005." The post also highlights how dramatic the swing has been compared to recent years. "By comparison, new homes were 10% more expensive just 3 years ago, measured by the 12-month moving average," it said, adding that "the difference was as much as 40% in 2012," following the 2008 financial crisis. It concludes by saying, "Something is seriously wrong with the housing market." Source: Benzinga.com Vishaal Sanjay
